The Importance of Small Groups

Ed Stetzer from Christianity Today

Personal Discovery happens in small groups better than large groups for a number of reasons. You can learn, ask questions, involve yourself in the lives of others, and generally make yourself vulnerable among other people who are doing the same in small groups.

You just can't do that in a worship service. There is no conversation and no feedback. There's no room to question any part of what's being taught. Spiritual growth happens better with others, in community, with open lines of communication and freedom to speak into one another's lives.

Smaller Communities are More Effective and act more like, well, communities. That may seem like a given, but the bigger the group is, the less like community it feels. The kind of community I am advocating requires a level of intimacy easily lost as numbers grow. You simply cannot know everyone beyond a certain point, and you certainly will not be more open in a large group of people you don't know.

Deeper Friendships Double as Accountability. When people know you, really know you, your life becomes far more transparent, including your sin.

Others learn to read you and will call you out for those sins, creating opportunities to deal with real life difficulties as they surface. This is part of what we should expect from good friends.

Maximum Participation is delivered through small groups. There are opportunities to discuss the issues with others in the church. Church life issues can be discussed openly among trusted friends. Mission can be planned out and participated in together. Lives are sharpened and leaders developed. Small groups are an absolute necessity for involving as many people as possible in the life and ministry of your church.

"If instead of a gem, or even a flower, we should cast the gift of a loving thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give."

—George MacDonald, Scottish author

"Smile at each other, smile at your wife, smile at your husband, smile at your children, smile at each other -- it doesn't matter who it is -- and that will help you to grow up in greater love for each other." —Mother Teresa

He knows the burden of each heart,
He sees each falling tear;
He can the truest peace impart
In place of doubt and fear.
He watches o'er me constantly,
He knows my feeble frame;
His keeping power, His faithful love
Are evermore the same.

The Most Important Question

During the second month of nursing school, a professor gave his class a pop quiz. The last question read like this: "What is the first name of the woman who cleans the school?"

Surely this was some kind of joke. The students had seen the cleaning woman several times. She was tall, dark-haired and in her 50s, but how would they know her name? The students handed in their papers, leaving the last question blank.

Before class ended, one student asked if the last question would count toward the quiz grade. "Absolutely," said the professor, "In your careers you will meet many people. All are significant. They deserve your attention and care, even if all you do is smile and say hello."

The class never forgot that lesson. They also learned her name was Dorothy.

GOES THE WAY, AND
shows the way.
