Doors and more report.....

Church year 2020

Cathy DeWoody January 2021

At a zoom meeting of the congregation, we voted on putting aside money for a door to close off the fellowship hall from the main hallway. I mentioned that I had a contractor who could do the work.

Allen and I met with Pastor the next day. We discussed the door as well as other projects that could be looked at by the contractor. The other projects included the door in the sacristy, closing off the stairs going up, the window and door by Pastor's office, the hanging of the TV and changing the lightbulb on the stained-glass window. We talked about getting individual bids for each project so we can pick and choose what we could afford.

I called Annie from Annie Does What Honey Don't. She came out the next day and gave us the bids for the items to be completed.

We met the following Saturday. It was discussed and thought the bids were very reasonable. The committee decided it wanted two more bids. I took the names given to me to check out. One company only did kitchens and never called me back. The other company was contacted by Russ and he had a hard time getting ahold of them.

Pastor had wanted to get the work done before we had in-person church service. This way we could keep social distancing and keep the congregation safe.

Annie was able to start right away. The church paid for the French doors in fellowship hall. The other projects were completed with donations from the congregation.

An accordion door at the base of the stairs was installed in December thanks to another donation.
