

"Stewardship is a concept that can be traced back to ancient civilizations. A steward was put in charge of the master's household, responsible for maintaining the welfare of the people and the property of the owner. Because a steward did not own the property himself, the steward's ethic involved caring for something on behalf of someone else."

"Applying this concept to the world today, stewards are those who care for something that they do not own and that they will pass on to the next generation."

We at Knox take our stewardship role very seriously, but we cannot do it alone. We look to everyone who is part of the Church and those who would like to join us to help us in our goal to preserve Knox United Church for future generations.
