Drama of Easter by Scott Tolhurst

You probably remember where you were on November 22, 1963. The date may not jog your memory, but the event will. That was the day of the President Kennedy assassination. Many of you recall where you were and what you were doing when you heard the tragic news. I read in a news clipping of a unique occurrence that day. In Texas, a high school play was on stage. For added realism to the scene, a young actor held a transistor radio that was turned on. Suddenly the music was interrupted with a news bulletin that the president had been shot. The report froze the actors in their tracks and the play tumbled through confusion to a sudden halt. The smaller story on stage had been interrupted by a larger event outside their script. Their pretend reality was invaded by a larger reality. I can't think of a better description of Easter than that.

We aren't high school drama students, but many of us live by the roles we play. We know our lines and stand on our marks. We hope for more comedy than tragedy in our lives. But, we can't guarantee a "happily ever after" ending. Since this is our life story and we are central to it, we begin to think that it is all important - perhaps all there is. Our stage becomes centre stage. We struggle to realize that there is a larger story happening.

Easter is the entrance of God's story upon ours. The Author of Life, who is often hidden behind the curtain, steps upon this world's stage and surrenders to the darkness of death. There is confusion, pain and disillusionment upon all who witness it. Just when you think that the story is done, the curtain parts into brilliant light. The story is not over! There is more to come and it will have no ending. "Happily ever after" is true!

Easter reminds me that God is writing a story larger than my own. Easter is God's grace to harmonize my broken story into His grander eternal theme. He takes the scribbling of my own script and edits it with love and wisdom. He teaches me to see the bigger drama and to follow the direction of Jesus. When I stop insisting that He follow my script and I allow Him to take centre stage, it's not just that my life goes better. I become reconciled into an eternal drama filled with glory. It is grace and mercy that God steps into our world. Left to myself, my own story would end in death - final and complete. But the Author of creation is writing a story of life - glorious, unending and yours - if you want it.
