Two Brothers

Years ago a small town merchant had identical twin boys. They were so close they dressed alike. It was said that their extraordinary closeness was the reason they never married. When their father died they took over the family business. Their relationship was considered the model of creative collaboration.

Because he was busy, one of the brothers neglected to ring up a sale and absentmindedly left a dollar bill on top of the cash register while he went to the front of the store to wait on a customer. Remembering the dollar, he returned to deposit it only to find the bill was gone. He asked his brother if he had seen it, but the brother said he had not.

An hour later he asked his brother again, but this time with an obvious note of suspicion. His brother became very angry and defensive. Every time they tried to discuss it the conflict grew worse culminating in vicious charges and countercharges. Eventually they dissolved their partnership and built a partition down the middle of the store, and started two separate and competing businesses. For twenty years it continued as an open divisive sore in the community.

One day a car with an out of state license pulled up in front of the stores. A well dressed man entered one brother's shop and asked how long the store had been there. Learning it had been twenty years, he said, "Then you are the one with whom I must settle an old score."

"Some twenty years ago I was out of work, drifting from place to place, and I happened to get off a boxcar in your town. I had no money and had not eaten for three days. As I was walking down the alley behind your store, I looked in and saw a dollar bill on top of the cash register. Everyone else was in the front of the store. I had been raised in a Christian home and I had never before in all my life stolen anything, but that morning I was so hungry I took that dollar bill. That act has weighed on my conscience ever since, and I finally decided that I would never be at peace until I came back and faced up to that old sin and make amends. Would you let me now replace that money and pay you whatever is appropriate for damages?"

When the stranger finished his confession, he was amazed to see the old store owner shaking his head in deep sorrow and beginning to weep. Finally the old man gained control and took the gentleman by the arm, asking him to go to the store next door and tell its owner the same story. The stranger complied. Only this time two old men who looked almost identical wept side by side.

Unforgiving, merciless spirits had cost them years of relationship and support for one another.

Ephesians 4:4-6

There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called to one hope when you were called; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.

Beulah is looking for volunteers to serve as greeters on Sunday mornings. Church greeters make people feel welcome, relaxed and comfortable. It is a vital ministry.

Two to four people would work together to open the door for people coming in, hand out bulletins, help newcomers to know where restrooms are, etc. It is very important for people to be greeted by friendly faces when entering our church on Sunday mornings. If you would like to serve as a greeter, please sign up on the clipboard that will be passed around this morning. Greeters will serve on a rotating basis, probably about once every 6-8 weeks. Your whole family might volunteer to serve. Greeters can be all ages. A schedule will be made and shared in the bulletin.

THANK YOU to those who teach our children during the morning worship service. The number of children has increased and workers are needed! Let Susan or Christina know that you are available!

Polite Answer

Wanting to make a good impression on the pastor, a woman gave him a homemade apple pie. When he got it home, he cut a piece and took a bite. It was so horrible that he immediately spit it out and threw the rest out the window.

The next Sunday, the woman was first in line to greet him and asked how he liked the pie.

Thinking fast, he replied, "A pie like that doesn't last around my house very long."
