NEWS IN RESTORATIVE JUSTICE

A recent British Columbia-based research study found that the involvement and commitment of a community is central to the growth and use of Restorative Justice (RJ) in that community. Community involvement is “central” rather than “periphery”. This includes collaboration between residents, schools, community programs, and governmental bodies. In addition, the researchers stress that further learning about RJ is necessary, specifically regarding the role of traditional Indigenous justice practices in RJ.

Our Fundraiser is almost over...
But the work doesn't end here!

Thank you to everyone who worked hard to raise money for NSRJ and who donated to our cause. We are so blessed to be surrounded by a community who is so generous and passionate about Restorative Justice and embodies its good work in their every day lives!

THANK YOU

P.S. there are still a couple more days to donate! We are so close to $18,000- will you help us get there? Please donate here.
