ONE DAY. ONE VOICE. ONE PURPOSE.

"When you are no longer on this earth and your adopted/fostered child is long in years recounting their adoption/foster story to their kids/friends/etc, what is the one thing you hope so imprinted in their minds and hearts they carry it with them throughout their lives?"

The Johnson Family, adopted Chen Pei, Mia, and Roman

That they know how much they are loved. By all. Especially Jesus.

The St. John Family, adopted Robbie and Andrew

Todd: Jesus your brother and YHW, your Father loves you more than you can know. Your relationship with Him is worth anything you may need to lose to gain that.

Jacki: I'd like my sons to know that they were truly loved by us and that we are still cheering them on from heaven. Hopefully, they'll look back with dim remembrance on feelings of abandonment because they are overflowing with love and acceptance from our Heavenly Father.

The Kerata Family, adopted Niomi

“Our hope is for a full re-growth of trust in Niomi. To feel safe deep into her bones. We pray Niomi will know she is loved recklessly by her Heavenly Father & by her family. With that as her heart light, Niomi will light up the generations after her.

The Fooshee Family, adopted Aiden and Wesley

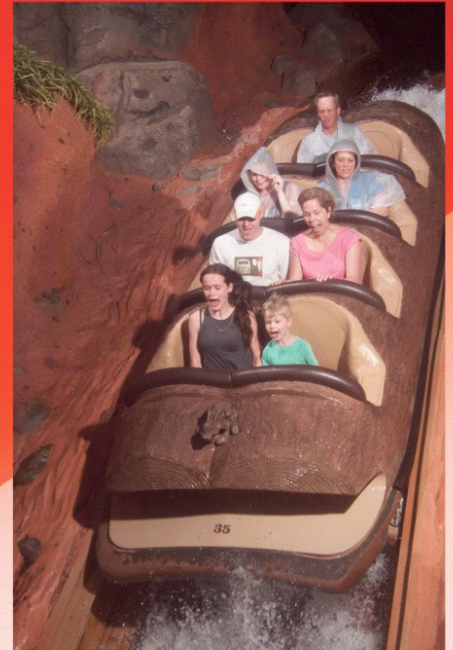

John: We would like our boys to know their adoption was an act of God. Yes, God moved through us (their parents and their older siblings). But ultimately, God delighted in them so much that he wanted to tangibly show them that they are deeply loved, specifically chosen, and will forever remain an inseparable part of his heart and family.

Lindsay: You are chosen. (i.e. NOT abandoned, forgotten, "put up" for adoption, passed off, etc.) CHOSEN.

The Byers Family, adopted Carmen

We hope Carmen can clearly see God's hand in her adoption story and find joy recounting all of the different ways in which He worked...and to know deeply that God was sovereign over all of it.

Sam Edwards, fosters Aarynne

I hope Aarynne always understands how proud I am of her that despite all she has been through, she was incredibly brave (and the gospel so incredibly rich) to choose to boldly love again. And I hope she carries with her and sees the power of the gospel to change the course of a family's history forever fully realized.

ONE DAY. ONE VOICE. ONE PURPOSE.

Taylor Family, adopted Liv

Our prayer is that Liv would grow up knowing without a doubt that she's loved and chosen by us and by God. That before the beginning of time, God knew her story and can redeem all brokenness for His glory and her good.
