Many Different Kinds of People

BASED ON 1 CORINTHIANS 12:1–11

"I am Jesus' friend," said Paul. "I never met Jesus before he died, but the Spirit of Jesus came to me in a very special way."

Paul went to many places telling people about Jesus. And he wrote lots of letters. He wrote them a long time ago, after the time when Jesus was alive again.

Here is part of one letter Paul wrote to the people who were in the church at Corinth. You can find both of the letters to the Corinthians in the Bible.

Dear sisters and brothers in Corinth:

Always remember that each one of us is different. No two people are alike. Some people are good at doing one thing, and others can do something else. But it is God's Spirit that helps them do those things.

Some people are really good at helping us to be fair and kind to each other. God's Spirit works through them to help us know that we are all part of God's family.

Some people help us understand why sometimes we get along nicely with each other, and sometimes we argue. We even fight sometimes. God's Spirit works through those people to help us understand our feelings.

Some people have good memories. They can remember directions – they can remember the words they read in a book – they can remember how to do things. God's Spirit works through them to help people remember things.

Some people know how to help when someone isn't feeling well. God's Spirit works through them to help people when they are sick.

People can do many different things. But it's God's Spirit that helps them do those things. Each person is different, but every one of them is able to do something important because the Spirit of God helps them do their best.
