Quotes of Wisdom

E. Stanley Jones said, "A faith that does not start with the individual, does not start. A faith that stops with the individual, stops."

St. Augustine wrote many years ago, "Do what you can, and then pray that God will give you the power to do what you cannot."

Marcus Aurelius gives us a very sobering thought. He says, "Each of us is worth just so much as the things are worth about which we busy ourselves." Just think of all those trivial things we spend our time doing.

Frederick Faber says, "To be straightforward with God is neither an easy nor a common grace."

There are three particular temptations that assail Christian leaders: The temptation to SHINE, WHINE, & RECLINE.

Four things come not back: the spoken word; the sped arrow; the past life; and the neglected opportunity.

What you are is God's gift to you; what you make of yourself is your gift to God.

Someone once said, "God doesn't look for medals or diplomas, just scars."

Please send a card of cheer to Marsha this week. She is battling lung cancer and is very ill. Thank you, Juanita Fry, for checking on her and caring for her.

Yes, the Lord has done great things for us, and we are filled with joy.
 Psalm 126:3

We Are All Equal Here!

The story is told of the Duke of Wellington, that once when he remained to take the sacrament at his parish church, a very poor old man went up the opposite aisle, and reaching the communion table, knelt down close by the side of the duke.

Someone came and touched the poor man on the shoulder, and whispered to him to move further away, or to rise and wait until the duke had received the bread and wine.

But the eagle eye and the quick ear of the great commander caught the meaning of that touch and that whisper. He clasped the old man's hand and held him, to prevent his rising, and in a reverent undertone, but most distinctly, said—"Do not move, we are all equal here."

As a boy, Dr. James Cleland, Chaplain of Duke University, was deeply impressed by his mother's love for the Communion Service.

For over sixty years she seldom missed a celebration. He sought her interpretation of the Lord's Supper one day and wrote, "She looked at me frankly and said, seriously and determinedly, 'Our Lord asked his friends not to forget Him, I am one of His friends. I do not forget Him.'"

We gather today about the Lord's Table as friends of Jesus.

Mark 14: 22-25

²² And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, blessed and broke it, and gave it to them and said, "Take, eat; this is My body."

²³ Then He took the cup, and when He had given thanks He gave it to them, and they all drank from it. ²⁴ And He said to them, "This is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many. ²⁵ Assuredly, I say to you, I will no longer drink of the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new in the kingdom of God."

Teaching by Example

A teacher put this question to little James in his arithmetic class, "James, suppose your mother made a pie, and there were ten of you at the table -- your mother and father and eight children. How much of the pie would you get?"

James replied, "That's easy! I would get one ninth."

His teacher contradicted him, "No, no, James. Pay attention! There are ten of you. Ten, remember. You know your fractions."

The reply came from James, "I know my fractions, but you don't know my mother! She would say that she didn't want any pie."

Those of us who were raised in Christian homes learned that Christian charity has its specialties. It is a rare man who will make dinner for a family in need. It is a common thing for Christian women to take food to those recovering from surgery.

More than that, however, as young James illustrated, the most common example that a Christian mother shows her young children is that of sacrifice. It may not be something young children understand to its depth, but it is unmistakable in its impression. Mom makes sacrifices for her family. As we grow older, we learn even more from this. We learn why Mom makes sacrifices for her family: because she loves them. Mom may be frazzled at the end of the day, but it's the frazzle of a human being doing the things she loves to do. There is a difference between labor and "labor of love." It seems, therefore, that in our earliest and closest examples of love we learn this principle: Love means sacrifice.

You cannot love someone without sacrificing for them. It is the way in which the universe is constructed, a moral principle not to be altered. The coming of our Lord and his sacrifice on the Cross are the supreme example of that principle. How could it be otherwise? The One whose very character is love comes in the flesh; could He then avoid sacrificing for the ones He loves, namely, us? He did more than that. He did not just sacrifice for us; He became the Sacrifice for us. With His own body and blood He became the sacrifice for our sins.

In so doing, He showed us another side of love. Love does not wait for the beloved to become worthy. A mother with a newborn baby knows that it will take years just to get to "please" and "thank you." The smile of an infant is a joyous thing. A howling infant who needs his diaper changed, face fed and a nap is quite another. Mom cannot turn the kid back in at the hospital. Love cannot wait for worthiness. Christ is our sacrifice, not because we are worthy, but because He loves us.

As you take the Lord's Supper, remember: He loved you first.
