PWRDF history

1958

- A bump (collapse) in a coal mine in Springhill, Nova Scotia kills 75 men.
- The tragedy moves Anglicans and other Canadians to respond with assistance for the stricken families.
- One year later, The Primate's World Relief Fund is established.

1970s

- PWRDF commits to addressing long-term development needs and to working in partnership with local communities and organizations.

2018

- PWRDF marks 60 years of supporting people, partners and progress.

Making a world of difference

PWRDF Strategic Plan 2019-2024

A sustainable future

We will steward our resources wisely through innovative fundraising, volunteer engagement, sharing our success stories and by working with youth on global justice issues.

Mutual reconciliation

We will accompany and support First Nations, Métis and Inuit people, guided by the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the priorities of Indigenous communities and organizations in Canada.

Strong partnerships

We will leverage our resources by partnering with local development organizations, especially those working to empower women and girls and respond to humanitarian crises.

Collaborative approach

We will foster a culture of learning and innovation for staff and volunteers in Canada, as well as for our partners, as we support one another in the pursuit of inclusion, peace and justice.

Meaningful results

We will strive for improved food security and resilience in the face of climate change, and support programs around gender equality and accessibility to health care, including care for mothers and babies, in the most vulnerable communities.

“If you want to walk fast, go alone.
If you want to walk far, go together.”

Working Together: Partnership Defines Us

PWRDF takes this African proverb to heart. When we work with others, so much more can happen. We work with partners on the ground who know the specific needs and priorities of their communities. They are our eyes, ears and hands.
