

Liaison Team: Who We Are and What We Do

Purpose

The Liaison Team is a group of servant leaders called to serve as a bridge between the church family and leadership. Our role is to listen well, communicate clearly, and help keep the congregation informed and encouraged during this season of growth and transition.

What We Do

- Communicate with care - We share timely and accurate updates about church events, leadership transitions, and ministry developments.
 - Gather and share feedback - We listen to your thoughts, questions, and concerns and relay them to church leadership in a respectful, constructive way.
 - Support clarity and unity - We contribute to tools such as newsletters, calendars, and announcements to help everyone stay informed and connected.
 - Promote connection - We serve as points of contact across ministries (including teachers, small groups, worship, and more) to ensure alignment and clear communication.
 - Collaborate behind the scenes - We work together to develop communication plans and present updates to church leadership, always with the goal of strengthening the body.

What We Do Not Do

- We do not make final decisions on church direction or vision; those are guided by our elders.
 - We are not a replacement for church leadership. We assist by helping carry and clarify their message to the broader church.
 - We do not speak on behalf of individuals unless specifically asked to do so. We focus on shared themes and feedback.
 - We are not just messengers; we are committed to building connection, clarity, and care within the church community.
