Pastor Zachariah Harris III

All Saints: I See Dead People

There is an interesting phrase I once heard at a conference I attended: “Tradition is Peer Pressure from Dead People.” This pronouncement brought forth laughter from the crowd and contextually was spoken with a bit of derision in its tone. However, of the 9 hours I spent this particular day, this phrase was the only thing I wrote down.

On the one hand, I could laugh along with everyone else as a Pastor who has all too often had to deal with “Tradition” in the form of that oft quoted church phrase, “We’ve NEVER done it THAT way!” (Translation for non-church folk: “We’ve ALWAYS done it THIS way!”) I believe that was the context in which this phrase was intended.

It reminded me of how many grand traditions have been kept and cherished out of some false sacrosanct feeling of obligation to the actions of ancestors. Take for example the old beach cottage our family still visits that my grandfather built in 1933. It was only in the past decade or so that we added A/C in the form of window units because we never had those before. Open windows had been endured for most of my life because “that’s the way the cottage was designed.” Finally, someone in the family decided on one of those 105-degree July days that if my grandfather had had the option of A/C, he would have probably loved it! The open window WAS the A/C of his day! And what many times gets taken for tradition today was simple necessity in the past. And my guess is that if some of those dead people could talk, they would heartily agree that the newer version is much preferred.

For all you who are church folk, you can probably fill a whole book with the list of things like this that the past 2000 years have found written in stone that were never intended to be canonized. From wordings in bulletins, to buildings and parts of buildings, to anything with some kind of brass plaque on it, there is someone out there who will put so much stock in church stuff that was just utilitarian that they forget the actual canon of the Gospel and Scriptures that the Faith is based on!

But what caused a sly smile on my face as that phrase was spoken was my twist on the intention of how that phrase was to be taken. Especially as the end of this month culminates in Reformation Sunday directly followed by All Saints Sunday when we remember all those who have died in the faith, hear that phrase again: “Tradition is the Peer Pressure of Dead People.” Hear that first word not spoken, but sung by the voice of Tevye from “Fiddler on the Roof.” Tradition in that voice is something to be cherished even when it may make life harder rather than easier. The peer pressure of tradition that I feel is a sense that was taught to me by my parents first and foremost. Truth, honesty, equality, compassion, empathy, and many other characteristics that I try (and many times fail) to emulate were the very traditions that were taught from my earliest memories.

There are school teachers whose wisdom whispers in my ears as I move through life as if they were speaking over my shoulder, though I know they have not walked the earth for years. Friends and parishioners whose funerals I presided over still offer guidance to me. And not only my mother and father, but aunts and uncles and grandparents still speak to me in simple things: from how we hold a paint brush, to how we treat everyone with respect, to how we realize that whatever we face today that seems impossible is overshadowed by what God can do with just a mustard seed of faith! It is the tradition of what our family stands for passed from one generation to another. And to quote from the classic movie, “The Sixth Sense,” yes, I see dead people. And there is a sense of peer pressure from that great cloud of witnesses.

I wish I had a great churchy way to turn that phrase into a positive. To tell you that the peer pressure comes from one who tells us to love God and others more than self (and not to hate). That the one whispering over my shoulder says not to worry about what we eat, drink, or wear and just to look at how the Father takes care of those birds in the trees. That the Church is not just a building; God’s children come in every shape, size, color, and packaging you can imagine; and Hope, Love, and Truth are not abstracts, but a person named Jesus.

Yeah, I wish I could use that image. But that Tradition is modeled not by dead people, but by someone who is very much alive. And, of course, the most important Tradition is to share the promise that just as He is alive, so too will be all those others I’ve mentioned, as well as you and me and all God’s children! So, along with all the wonderful progress the past three years have brought forth here at First Lutheran, we are reminded by Martin Luther and those Reformation reformers of the faith as well as ALL the Saints who laid the foundation for each of us personally, that our current progress and our current faith stands on the shoulders of so many who came before us. No matter what new vistas God may be leading us toward, we should never lose sight of the tradition, the basis of what has been passed on to us, which ultimately reminds us to always act in the ways that Jesus would.

Living Under His Grace,
Pastor Zach

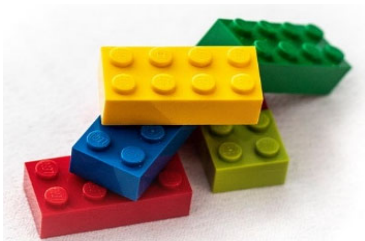

October 4th

Service for Blessing of the Animals

The first Saturday in October is the Feast of Saint Francis. It has therefore been a traditional time to bless some of the most constant members of our families. Those pets who seem to be precious right along with the rest of our family deserve a bit of recognition. Since St. Francis is the patron saint of animals, this is the day we will gather outside for a short service to bless all our furry (and maybe even slithering) little friends. From dogs and cats to hermit crabs, if they are your special pet, you are invited to bring them at 1 pm for a special blessing. After all God created all living things, not just us humans!

To continue that theme, we will have a showing of the full-length movie, "Super Pets." Time and details are still to be determined, but look for the opportunity to explore the heroic actions of our animal friends along with a bit of Gospel message and fun!

HALLOWEEN LEGOS EVENT: OCTOBER 12TH IN THE FELLOWSHIP HALL

As we have seen, there are several lessons we can learn about the Church using Legos. For October, we have a Halloween inspired theme set for October 12th. We have a whole new set of Lego kits to choose from that have been on display since Rally Day and can be seen Sundays outside the Pastor's Office. Old and young alike are invite to participate!

Just sign up for which kit you want to assemble and get ready for a time of Lego inspired fun. Even if you aren't into the building of the Legos, you might want to come for the Fellowship and fun. For the uninitiated, you might be surprised what you can learn about God and the Church, so look out!

The Gospel Choir Group is holding practice again. All are welcome.

As part of a national organization the First Lutheran BeFrienders receive a monthly quote with reflection questions. Given what is happening in our world these days I thought the September installment was fitting.

“Every time you smile, offer a helping hand, lend your shoulder for someone to lean on, or give your love freely, you are touching a fellow human being who in turn will touch another, and so it goes. The ripple effect of kindhearted love is changing the world.”

Author Unknown

Reflection Question 1: During your interactions this week, who might benefit from your smile?

Now just imagine you are walking down the street, and someone walks by and smiles, maybe even goes so far as to say, “Good morning” or “Have a good day.” I dare to imagine this will brighten your day. And then you pass that on to someone else and so on and so on. How much better would our world become in a very short time?

Reflection Question 2: Call a friend or family member that may be experiencing a challenging time and extend kindhearted listening.

We all go through challenging times in our lives. It is important to reach out to someone experiencing a tough time to let them know you are there to listen. Just listening without judgement, or without trying to fix them, or without arguing your own point is so valuable and is something everyone can do. Someone once said we have been born with two ears and only one mouth. This may just mean we are to listen without thinking we have to correct or change the other person.

Reflection Question 3: How can you contribute to the ripple effect of kindhearted love in an ongoing and intentional way?

There are so many ways we can contribute to the ripple effect and, guess what, it doesn’t have to cost a penny. Just a few are:

Smile at someone you see on the street whether you know them or not.

Call a friend or family member and let them know you are there to listen.

Send a text or email of encouragement or simply to say, “I am thinking of you.”

Pray for those you encounter as you go about your day.

The list could go on and on.

I challenge anyone reading this to think about something simple they can do to brighten someone’s day. If we all do this, we can change the world.

LWR Shipping Fund

LWR spends about $1.9 million for its shipping fund, distributing approximately $18 million in quilts and kits each year. Donor contributions help transport these items worldwide. Please consider donating to this cause. We will have a special "noisy" offering on October 12th.

NEW

Weekly Bible Study

This group will be meeting weekly on Wednesdays from 2-3pm in the Parlor. This group will be studying the Seven Faith Practices- Pray, Study, Worship, Invite, Encourage, Serve and Give.

- All women are welcome to join any of the Bible Studies offered. Each one covers a different topic.
- Special "noisy" offering will be held on October 12th. Our goal will be to raise $500 to send to LWR to help offset their cost of shipping quilts and kits.

COUNTRY CORNER

On behalf of Our Saviors and Trinity Lutheran Churches, I would like to extend great gratitude and appreciation from our small rural churches on the occasions that we have not been able to accommodate a large crowd for the purpose of giving love and support to a grieving family in our church; in the form of a funeral. This is an essential form of pastoral care.

The professional behavior extended to us during these occasions have also been much appreciated; from the greeting of your pastor, welcoming us, to your Office Manager's assistance, to the super job of your musician and the person operating the sound system, to the great servants in the kitchen and fellowship hall offering great tasting food.

Thank you also for the professional job of anyone that I may have missed. Our 50 year relationship is much appreciated. Thank you again and again.

Sincerely,

Cindy Gardner

The Sounds of Worship

Have you ever paused to listen — really listen — to the world around you?

“Make a joyful noise to the Lord, all the earth; break forth into joyous song and sing praises!” (Psalm 98:4, ESV)

The hum of morning birdsong. The laughter of children. The comforting voice of a friend. Even the quiet moments of stillness. These aren’t just background noise — they’re invitations to worship.

God designed a world that sings. Worship isn’t limited to Sunday mornings or formal songs; it’s woven into the everyday moments that tune our hearts to Him. And when we pause to truly hear it, we are drawn into praise, right where we are.

What sound lifts your heart toward God today? Take a moment to listen. Let it remind you of His love and nearness.

We love our volunteers—and we’re inviting new ones to jump in this fall! If you enjoy helping with kids, Sunday School and Wednesday School is the place for you to serve.

Question? Does this mean I need to be available every week?
No! We are looking for volunteers to sign up for a month at a time. Teaching Teams of two are encouraged to sign up.

Question? Why Teaching Teams of two? Schedules, change, kids get sick. Teams of two provides a built-in substitute when you need to be available.

How many Teaching Teams are Needed?

Four teams are needed for Sundays and two for teams for Wednesday School.

Do I have to sign up as a Team of two? NO! We encourage individuals who wish to volunteer to sign up also. We will help match you with another individual.

How Do I sign up?

Contact Hailey Smith via email haileyb2555@gmail.com or text 701-770-6299 or sign up at the receptionist desk located outside the sanctuary.
