

When The Family Fights

James 4:1-2

James addresses conflict and fighting among believers. Presently our nation is in turmoil because there is a think tank, who currently occupies government positions, that is trying to reshape America and much is being done under the guise of conservative Christian churches.

There was a period in Israel's history where they had no king and the people did as they saw fit. Today it seems as if the children of God don't obey him either. We are trapped in a warped psychological, social and political mess, and we join in with the world.

God needs to reprogram and rebuild us. He needs to rebuild us with Jesus as the true cornerstone, tearing down walls, pulling up roots, and laying down the true vine.

While we are jockeying for position, we need to be reminded that this world is reserved for fire. We are presently experiencing nothing but doom and gloom.

James tells the people to stop acting like babies and being mad because you can't get what you want. You act out of greed and pleasure. As you fight, the devil drags you away because your heart is hardened.

You should not fight, but embrace your new family. God knows your hurts and pains, and only he can fix your pain.

Your biological family may not or cannot provide the comfort or help you need, but you have another family in the body of Christ. We all have the same goal of reaching heaven one day and uniting with God, so we have to be brothers and sisters in Christ. Do not be hasty to do anything, but wait on God. Take all your burdens to Him for he is Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end.
