There is worship

By Michael Orr

Far from the buildings in the dawn of my youth,
Not an hour on Sunday but a lifetime of truth,
There is worship in places you'd never expect,
For the brave and courageous who would pause and reflect.

For though there is worship with sisters and brothers,
There is worship beyond all the "love one another's".
In spaces where holy holds a place all its own,
Where praise is permitted in the depths of unknown.

There is worship in silence where our wounds are severe,
There is worship in presence when Jesus is near.
There is worship where grateful is poured into loss,
There is worship that's carried to the foot of the cross.

There is worship in failure with my pride offered up,
There is worship on empty when I pour out my cup,
There is worship in triumph as you author my story,
There is worship in newness as You show me Your glory.

There is worship in nature and the work of Your Hand,
There is worship in power as You cause me to stand.
There is worship in Heaven where my hope is assured,
There is worship in Spirit where my soul is secured.

Though I long for communion with the family beside me,
I need more than a meeting but a place You would hide me,
For in every small moment and in all that I do,
From here to eternal there is worship in You.
