Youth Who Pray

Dear Friends,

Last month I spoke for five consecutive days at Temple Baptist Church and Temple Christian School in Titusville, Florida. The school begins the school year with a Spiritual Emphasis week. I had the opportunity to address students in chapel services each day and in multiple classes daily throughout the week.

Not only did I speak to the students concerning their spiritual life and dedication to God, I also addressed the matter of missions in each of the 19 speaking assignments I had that week.

On the last day of Spiritual Emphasis week and at the conclusion of the chapel service, a great majority of the students responded to the altar call. I was both blessed and challenged by seeing the passion of these young people.

In a world where much of the media attention concerning youth carries a negative note, it is easy to paint the youth of America with a broad brush and assume that all of them are in a downward spiritual spiral. But as God reminded Elijah that there were seven thousand who had not bowed to idolatry, I am blessed to witness first-hand that there is still a multitude of young people who love God and want to serve Him.

The response of the young people at the altar was a blessing and encouragement.
