Our fall confession calls us out as the stiff-necked people that we are. People who have a tendency to be proud, stubborn, uncompromising, and spiritually rebellious. This is all part of our humanity. But we are also God's people who receive the gifts of forgiveness, mercy, grace, and unconditional love.

Throughout this fall season as we explore the scriptures, we will continue to be called out in the ways that turn us away from whom God wants us to be. We will hear examples of the ways Jesus treats the needy, poor, and disregarded. We will hear the ways in which we live our lives in ways that don't reflect God's love for all creation. And we will listen for the Holy Spirit's guidance and direction in the ways we can turn away from the things of the world and reorient ourselves toward God. This opportunity for reflection of our lives gives us the ability to transform the ways that don't serve us or serve God.

May we turn our hearts and ears toward the Holy Spirit that we may be filled with the love of Christ Jesus, the hope of the Holy Spirit, and the blessings of our Creator!

Blessings,

Pastor Karla

Notes From the Director of Music

Choosing Hymns in Lutheran ELCA Worship: A Director of Music's Perspective

As the Director of Music for our congregation, I often find myself reflecting on the profound role that hymns play in our worship experience. Hymns are not just songs; they are theological expressions, communal prayers, and vehicles for personal reflection. The process of selecting hymns for our worship services is both an art and a responsibility, one that I undertake in close collaboration with our pastor.

The Collaborative Process

The selection of hymns begins with thoughtful discussions between the pastor and myself on an as needed basis. We consider the liturgical calendar, the themes of the scripture readings, and the overall mood we wish to convey during worship. This collaborative approach ensures that our musical choices align with our worship goals and enhance the spiritual experience of the congregation.

While some may prefer to sing only songs they already know, it's important to recognize that our hymn selections strive to introduce a variety of musical styles and texts. This diversity serves several purposes: it enriches our worship, fosters spiritual growth, and encourages us to engage with the broader Christian tradition. Hymns that may be unfamiliar at first can become cherished parts of our worship life, deepening our connection to God and one another.

Embracing New Tunes

One of the questions I frequently encounter is why we use different tunes for various liturgical seasons. The church year is marked by distinct themes and celebrations, each with its own unique character. For instance, the solemnity of Lent calls for reflective and somber hymns, while the joy of Easter invites us to sing with exuberance. By varying hymns and tunes throughout the seasons, we create a worship environment that mirrors the rhythms of our faith journey.

Gods Work. Our Hands

On Sunday, September 7th, St. John's celebrated Gods Work. Our Hands Sunday with special liturgy. Following worship, members gathered in Fellowship Hall for a hymn sing and meal. The hall was filled with the wonderful sound of music being lifted up to God. We were treated to special music by soloists and musicians. A delicious meal was prepared and served by Social Ministry. It was a time of gathering and fellowship.

The theme was – Alone We Can Do So Little...Together We Can Do So Much. A special thank you to all of St. John's volunteers. The saying of "It takes a village..." runs true. Everyone's part, whether big or small, helps to make the many ministries of our church flourish. We are very blessed to have such a committed group of volunteers.

On Thursday, September 11th, Social Ministry continued with God's Work. Our Hands. We packed snack baskets for our 4 fire departments. Thank you to everyone that donated drinks and snack items for our local fire departments. The Northumberland and Point Township Police Departments received lunches provided by Social Ministry.
