Grow Me A Garden

By Michael Orr

Oh Lord...

The world seems so heavy, the soil so rough,
I wonder if what I do is enough.
My garden is planted in toil and sun,
With weeds reappearing when the pulling is done.

So grow me a garden when the soil is dry,
Hold every seed steady by the things you supply,
For all that is growing was done by design,
By your will and your wisdom, far greater than mine.

Yet even those moments where the soil is good,
I grow weary of sowing the things that I should.
The thorns of achievement choke out every prayer,
And the specter of doubt makes me ask if You care.

So grow me a garden when the soil is rough,
Shield the sun from my seedlings so I know I'm enough.

I look all around me with hands bled and heavy,
As the waters close into my heart at the levee.
They flood all my work in this fast, weary life,
As I'm torn and I'm tossed in my struggle and strife.

I grow me a garden when the soil is failing,
edge a wall round my courage when the storm winds
w. e wailing.

r you made this vessel, and by faith I will know,
at You'll grow me a garden where the flowers still w.
