

The Day of the Lord

Joel 1:1-20

Big Idea: Studying prophecy isn't about fear—it's about preparation. 27% of the Bible is prophetic, pointing us to God's faithfulness. Joel's warning calls us to wake up, weep over sin, and cry out to the Lord. Are we listening? Will we tell our children?

Day 1: Wake Up and Listen

Reading: Joel 1:1-4; Deuteronomy 6:4-9

God begins His message through Joel with a simple command: "Hear." Before we can respond to God's truth, we must first listen. In our noisy, distracted world, we often sleepwalk through our spiritual lives, intoxicated by comfort and worldly pursuits. God calls us to wake up—to be spiritually sober and alert. The Shema reminds us that loving God with all our heart begins with hearing His Word. Today, ask yourself: Am I truly listening to what God is saying? Have I allowed His Word to penetrate my heart, or am I merely going through religious motions? Create space today to sit quietly before the Lord, opening your Bible and your heart to truly hear what He wants to speak to you.

Notes:

The Day of the Lord

Joel 1:1-20

Big Idea: Studying prophecy isn't about fear—it's about preparation. 27% of the Bible is prophetic, pointing us to God's faithfulness. Joel's warning calls us to wake up, weep over sin, and cry out to the Lord. Are we listening? Will we tell our children?

Day 2: Tell the Next Generation

Reading: Joel 1:3; Psalm 78:1-8

God's command to "tell your children" echoes throughout Scripture. The faith we've received isn't meant to end with us—it's a sacred trust to pass along. When we fail to share

God's faithfulness with the next generation, we leave them spiritually vulnerable and unprepared for life's storms. This isn't just about formal teaching; it's about weaving God's truth into everyday conversations—at the dinner table, during car rides, at bedtime. Our children and grandchildren need to hear how God has worked in history and in our personal lives. What stories of God's faithfulness can you share today? Don't assume someone else will do it. Your testimony matters. Your obedience to pass on truth may be the very thing that anchors future generations to Christ.

Notes:

The Day of the Lord

Joel 1:1-20

Big Idea: Studying prophecy isn't about fear—it's about preparation. 27% of the Bible is prophetic, pointing us to God's faithfulness. Joel's warning calls us to wake up, weep over sin, and cry out to the Lord. Are we listening? Will we tell our children?

Day 3: Weep Over Sin

Reading: Joel 1:13-14; James 4:7-10

When was the last time you wept over your own sin? Our culture has lost the art of godly grief—the kind of sorrow that leads to genuine repentance. Joel called God's people to "lament" and "consecrate a fast," not as empty rituals, but as expressions of hearts broken over their rebellion against a holy God. We're quick to weep over personal losses or national tragedies, but do we mourn our pride, our selfishness, our spiritual complacency? James reminds us that God resists the proud but gives grace to the humble. True humility begins when we see our sin as God sees it—not making excuses, not comparing ourselves to others, but genuinely grieving how we've dishonored Him. Take time today to examine your heart before God and allow His Spirit to produce godly sorrow that leads to life-changing repentance.

Notes:

The Day of the Lord

Joel 1:1-20

Big Idea: Studying prophecy isn't about fear—it's about preparation. 27% of the Bible is prophetic, pointing us to God's faithfulness. Joel's warning calls us to wake up, weep over sin, and cry out to the Lord. Are we listening? Will we tell our children?

Day 4: The Day of the Lord is Near

Reading: Joel 1:15-20; 1 Thessalonians 5:1-11

"The day of the Lord is near." These words should create both urgency and hope in our hearts. God will bring justice—He will judge sin and make all things right. For unbelievers, this is a terrifying reality. But for those clothed in Christ's righteousness, judgment day is the moment when faith becomes sight, when suffering ends, and when we see our Savior face to face. This truth should transform how we live today. We shouldn't be paralyzed by fear, but motivated by love and gratitude. Are you living with eternity in view? Does the reality of Christ's return influence your daily choices, your priorities, your relationships? Let the nearness of the Lord's return purify your heart and fuel your passion to live for His glory while there's still time.

Notes:

The Day of the Lord

Joel 1:1-20

Big Idea: Studying prophecy isn't about fear—it's about preparation. 27% of the Bible is prophetic, pointing us to God's faithfulness. Joel's warning calls us to wake up, weep over sin, and cry out to the Lord. Are we listening? Will we tell our children?

Day 5: Cry Out to the Lord

Reading: Joel 2:12-13; Psalm 51:1-17

In the midst of devastation, God extends an invitation: "Return to me with all your heart." This is the heart of the gospel—no matter how far we've wandered, no matter how deeply we've fallen into sin, God welcomes us back. He is "gracious and merciful, slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love." Our response must be more than external religious activity; God calls for torn hearts, not torn garments. He desires genuine repentance, authentic dependence, wholehearted devotion. What areas of your life need to be surrendered to God today? Where have you been holding back, maintaining control, or pursuing your own way? Cry out to the Lord with confidence—not because you deserve His mercy, but because His character guarantees it. Return to Him completely, and experience His restoring grace.

Notes: