FROM PASTOR DYTON

OUT OF MY MIND:

"Forgive As We Have Been Forgiven"

Is there someone you've been unwilling to forgive? Who is it that comes to mind? The truth is, there are some people in our lives that have caused such pain it will be impossible for us to forgive in our own strength. The hurt is just too deep. We need God to help us do what we cannot do for ourselves.

Being unwilling to forgive is an unwillingness to give God control. Getting even would be much easier, wouldn't it? So, how do you know when forgiveness is complete? Maybe that time comes when you can see that person and not get angry; or maybe that time has come when you no longer feel resentment and bitterness, just acceptance. Does that mean you trust that person? Of course not. But you can choose to let go of all the hurt so that it no longer dominates your thoughts, words, or actions. It is a great thing when we realize forgiveness of another has finally been completed.

If you're struggling with this area, remember: Jesus is our ultimate example. Nobody was more mistreated than Jesus, He had no sin. But he willingly died for our sins. And if Jesus can forgive us our sins like that, then with his help we can forgive others who have wronged us.
