

A pastor told his congregation, “Next week I’m going to preach about the sin of lying, so I want everyone to read Mark chapter 17 to prepare.”

The next Sunday, he stood up and asked, “Who actually read Mark 17?”

Almost every hand in the room went up.

The pastor smiled and said, “That’s interesting... because the Gospel of Mark only has 16 chapters.”

He paused.

“Now that I’ve got your attention... let’s talk about lying.”

A man told his pastor, “I think God is speaking to me.”

The pastor smiled and said, “That’s wonderful! What did He say?”

The man replied, “He told me I need to quit my job, sell everything I own, and move to a tropical island.”

The pastor raised an eyebrow. “Are you sure that’s God speaking?”

The man shrugged. “Well... it might also be me. The message got a lot louder after I Googled ‘cheap beach houses.’”

A guy was running late to church and couldn’t find a parking spot anywhere.

In desperation, he prayed, “Lord, if You give me a parking spot right up front, I promise I’ll go to church every single Sunday for the rest of my life.”

Suddenly—right at the front—someone pulls out and a perfect spot opens up.

The guy quickly pulls in and says, “Never mind, Lord... I found one.”
