My Life Reflects My Order

April Series: Living The Resurrection Life

Week Focus: Set Your Life In Order

Scripture – 1 Corinthians 14:40

“Let everything be done decently and in order.”

Devotional Reflection

Scripture calls us to let everything be done decently and in order, which means how we live daily matters to God. Order is not limited to one area—it touches every part of your life. The way you manage your time, your responsibilities, and your priorities reflects whether your life is aligned with this instruction. What you structure consistently is what your life will display.

Your life reflects what you prioritize. Whether you realize it or not, the way your life is ordered is telling a story. Your habits, your schedule, and your consistency reveal what matters most to you. When your life is aligned with God’s standard of order, it begins to reflect clarity, intention, and purpose.

Transformation is not only internal—it becomes visible through how you live. When your life is out of order, things begin to feel scattered and inconsistent. But when your life is brought into alignment, your actions begin to match what you value. This is how God’s work within you begins to show through you.

Over time, your life becomes a reflection of your structure. Patterns of stability, faithfulness, and intentional living begin to form. This is what it looks like for your life to be done “decently and in order”—not perfectly, but consistently aligned. What God is doing within you becomes visible in how you live daily.

Today, take a step back and observe your life. What does your current structure reveal? Where is God inviting you to bring greater order? You don’t have to change everything at once—just begin aligning one area, and let that alignment grow over time.

Focus for Today

My life reflects the order I create.

Practice

- Evaluate one area of your daily routine
 - Adjust it to reflect your priorities
 - Commit to consistency

Prayer

Lord, help my life reflect alignment and order. In Jesus name, Amen.
