The Journey Within

By Michael Orr

When I think of my life
And the places I've been,
I don't look from without,
But the journey within.

For the road that I travel,
Turns inward and strong,
Every inch holds a mile,
Every detour grows long.

Who I am holds a mystery,
Carving paths in the dark,
Where I am holds a challenge,
Both revealing and stark.

And what I am doing,
Stretches out in the clearing,
Where my present is forming,
And my future is nearing.

So I cling to redemption,
On this hard, broken way.
Holding vigil by starlight,
Pressing forward each day.

To this great resolution,
I return to again,
On the path strong and steady,
To the journey within.
