Through the Door of Hope

Hope is one of the great words of this life. It is not wishful thinking, blind optimism, or a vague desire that things might someday improve. Biblical hope is confident expectation grounded in the promises of God. It looks beyond the trouble of the moment and rests upon the faithfulness of the Lord who cannot lie. In a world filled with disappointment, fear, and uncertainty, the gospel opens before us a door of hope, but it is a door that must be entered.

The prophet Hosea spoke of God giving His people "the Valley of Achor as a door of hope" (Hosea 2:15). Achor was remembered as a place of trouble, connected with Israel's sin and sorrow. Yet God promised that even a valley associated with grief could become a doorway to hope. That is the power of God's grace. He can take what is broken, bitter, and burdensome and open a way forward for those who will return to Him.

For the Christian, hope begins in Christ (1 Peter 1:3). Our hope is living because our Savior is living. The empty tomb is not merely a fact to be believed, it is a doorway to be entered. Because Jesus rose, sin does not have to rule us, death does not have the final word, and faithful service to God is never in vain.

But hope must be entered by obedient faith. Jesus said, "I am the door. If anyone enters by me, he will be saved" (John 10:9). The gospel calls sinners to believe in Jesus, repent of sin, confess His name, and be baptized into Christ for the forgiveness of sins (Mark 16:16; Acts 2:38; Romans 6:3-4). In Christ, we find not a temporary escape from life's problems, but a sure and eternal hope.

This hope also changes how we live. Paul wrote, "Rejoice in hope, be patient in tribulation, be constant in prayer" (Romans 12:12). Hope gives strength when the road is hard. It teaches patience when answers do not come quickly. It keeps us praying when burdens are heavy. A Christian without hope will soon grow weary, but a Christian who keeps his eyes fixed on the promises of God can endure with joy.

However, hope is not automatic. A door may stand open, but one must still enter it. Many hear the gospel but delay obedience. Many know the promises of God but choose the passing pleasures of sin. Many stand near the door of hope while refusing to step through in faith. The Hebrew writer warns, "Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts" (Hebrews 3:15). Hope is offered now, but we are not promised tomorrow.

If you need a prayer request added, updated or removed, please use the back of the welcome card and place the card in the collection plate.
