PASTOR'S WELCOME

Summer is a unique season in our community. Our local area welcomes tens of thousands of visitors from near and far. Campgrounds fill, vacation homes turn on their lights, and our roads, restaurants, and beaches become places where people from many different backgrounds cross paths.

As Christians, these encounters invite us to remember that the Church is not confined to a building. While we gather each week in worship, the Church is ultimately the people of God living out the love of Christ wherever we are. The Church exists not only within the walls of our sanctuary but can also bear fruit in our neighborhoods, stores, restaurants, workplaces, and even on the boardwalk and beach.

Jesus often met people outside of traditional religious settings. He encountered fishermen along the shore, tax collectors in their workplaces, travelers along the road, and strangers in towns and villages. Again and again, Christ demonstrated that God's love reaches people wherever they are.

In Matthew 25, Jesus offers an important and challenging reminder: "I was a stranger and you welcomed me." Hospitality is more than good manners. It is a spiritual practice. Every person we meet bears the image of God, and every encounter presents an opportunity to share Christ's love through kindness, patience, and generosity.

During this busy season, it can be easy to see visitors as an interruption to our routines. What if we viewed them as neighbors whom God has placed in our path? What if our smiles or acts of welcome became small but meaningful witnesses to the grace of Christ?

Whether you are greeting a visitor in worship, helping someone find their way, serving in the community, or simply offering a kind word to a stranger, you are participating in the ministry of the Church. You are carrying the presence of Christ beyond these walls. My prayer for Bethany this summer is that we would be known not only for the worship that happens on Sunday mornings but also for the love that is shared throughout the week. May we see Christ in the stranger, welcome others as Christ has welcomed us, and remember that wherever we go, we carry the Church with us.

Grace and peace,
Rev. Jacob T. Jackson

With the colonies on the brink of collapse, the Rev. George Whitefield, Methodist, unites an entire generation with his thundering sermons and proclamations of liberty. In a miraculous turn of events, Benjamin Franklin becomes one of Whitefield's closest friends and greatest promoters. With the nation's freedom hanging in the balance, the founders discover true liberty cannot only be written into law -- it must be awakened in the hearts of the people.

SPECIAL SPOTLIGHT

The sacraments occupy a central place in United Methodist worship and theology as they are tangible signs of God's grace at work in the lives of believers and the community of faith. Baptism and Holy Communion connect Christians to God's saving work, the life of the church, and the mission of God's kingdom. This paper will examine the role and significance of Holy Communion and Baptism within the United Methodist tradition, arguing that these sacraments serve as means of grace through which God forms Christian identity, nurtures discipleship, and equips the church for faithful ministry in the world.

Holy Communion serves as both a means of grace and a central expression of the church's identity. United Methodist theology teaches that God uses the sacrament as an ordinary channel through which prevenient, justifying, and sanctifying grace are conveyed to believers. As a pastor, I am called not merely to administer Communion as a ritual, but to invite people into a living encounter with the grace of God.

Communion reminds the church of God's saving work through Jesus Christ while also making that grace present in the lives of believers today. The sacrament is more than an act of remembrance; it is a re-presentation of God's saving acts that allows the church to experience Christ's presence in the present moment. Through the power of the Holy Spirit, Christ is truly present at the Table and nourishes believers in their journey of salvation.

The communal nature of Communion is especially significant in my ministry. The sacrament unites believers with Christ and with one another, embodying the church as the body of Christ and modeling the reconciled community God desires for the world. Because the Table belongs to Christ, the United Methodist tradition practices an open table, welcoming all who respond in faith to Christ's invitation.

Communion is essential to ministry in the United Methodist tradition. Through Word and Table, God forms disciples, strengthens faith, extends grace, and points the church toward the heavenly banquet that is yet to come. The sacrament continually shapes both my pastoral leadership and the spiritual formation of the congregation.

Baptism serves as a foundational sacrament that proclaims God's grace, incorporates believers into the body of Christ, and forms Christian identity. United Methodist theology understands baptism as God's action rather than a human achievement. Through baptism, God claims us, incorporates us into the covenant community, and initiates us into the lifelong journey of discipleship.

As a pastor, I view baptism as both a personal and communal event. Baptism is an expression of faith and an act that unites believers with Christ and with the church. The sacrament reminds Christians that their identity is found in belonging to God and God's people. This understanding is important in a modern culture that emphasizes individualism. Through baptism, the church publicly affirms that each person is part of Christ's body and shares in the mission of God's kingdom.

Baptism points believers toward God's redemptive story and future hope. The sacrament connects creation, covenant, Christ, church, and the coming kingdom into a single narrative of salvation. Baptism reminds us that history is moving toward God's ultimate fulfillment and that Christians live between the promises already received and the kingdom not yet fully realized.

Finally, baptism calls the church into mission. Just as Christ commissions his followers to make disciples and baptize in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, the sacrament commissions believers to embody God's justice, righteousness, and grace in the world. Baptism is therefore not only an entrance into the church but also a calling to participate in God's ongoing work of redemption.

In United Methodist theology, Baptism and Holy Communion are biblically grounded sacraments instituted by Christ and recognized as means of grace through which God acts in the lives of believers. Baptism is ordinarily administered once as initiation into the covenant community and body of Christ, while Holy Communion is celebrated repeatedly for the nourishment and growth of disciples. Ordained elders are responsible for administering the sacraments, while licensed local pastors may do so within their appointed ministries. Together, these sacraments proclaim God's grace, form Christian identity, strengthen faith, and equip the church for ministry and mission.
