A Single Penny

By Michael Orr

A single penny may not be,
A worthy thing to stop and see.
Its value seems too small to hold,
Where dollars measure bought and sold.

But if a penny held a breath,
How many lost would lead to death?
And if a minute held a cent,
Would people care how it was spent?

For every fortune by the pound,
Is pennies lost or pennies found.
The ants or bees through one are many,
Where wealth increases by the penny.

And what if lives were pennies too?
Would it still matter what we do?
Would we discard a single birth,
Because so many roam the earth?

The One who made us by His word,
Beholds the life of every bird.
And by the smallest things He shows,
The worth of every seed that grows.

If wisdom follows nature's call,
Our hearts should cherish short and small.
And still receive this lesson learned,
A penny saved, a penny earned.
