Once More And Again
By Michael Orr

When words fill a river,
And no answer has tread,
With a heart drowned in sorrow,
Though the tears have been shed,

I sit by the waters
of all that has been,
And I offer a thank you,
Once more and again.

Every thank you I skip,
On the surface holds weight,
Where it ripples in time,
Through the echoes of fate.

As I hope that the waters,
Hold more than a spin,
As rivers meet oceans,
Once more and again.

If the waters are muddied,
And the banks are washed out,
If my spirit holds drift,
And my courage holds doubt,

I break bread by the waters,
And call it a win,
For clear waters will find me,
Once more and again.
