Oh Soul Redeemed

By Michael Orr

Oh soul redeemed in sacred strains,
Aurora's glow on soft refrains,
You stand beside the choral flight,
With holy words and angel's might!

My heart! Please wait, an ear I seek,
Before the highest praise you speak...
For I was ground into the dust,
Before I held this sacred trust.

My voice was dry and courted death,
Consuming life, with every breath.
And from the depths, of grave and grief,
My wounded throat, cried out "relief!"

And then the Morning Star came through,
Bled through the old, brought forth the new.
For this old soul stretched thin and worn,
Held wounded hands by love reborn.

In blood and water, life emerged,
The gravestone fell, the sickness purged.
From broken life where hope had perished,
New light broke through now held and cherished.

Oh soul redeemed with heart bowed low,
I turn my praise to Heaven's glow.
For every beauty counts the cost,
In Christ redeemed when all was lost.
