Longing for an Unbroken World

Ecclesiastes 3:16-4:16

10-11-2026

1. Why is it so troubling to see injustice in places where righteousness should prevail? How does the promise of God's final judgment shape the way we respond to injustice today?

2. How do the injustices of the world affect you? In what ways can we be a source of comfort to those who are in a place where they need to be comforted?

3. How can envy influence our work, spending, and pursuit of success? What is the difference between working diligently to honor God and working to keep up with others?

4. What are some ways the pursuit of personal success can cause us to neglect relationships? How can we intentionally cultivate relationships that provide encouragement, accountability, and help in times of need?

5. Why are even the wisest and most capable human leaders ultimately inadequate to meet our deepest needs? How does the reign of Jesus Christ give us hope that earthly leaders cannot provide?

6. The brokenness of this world should provoke in us a longing for a better world. How should that longing change the way we live now—in our work, relationships, response to injustice, and trust in Christ?
