

Read Acts 10:1-11:18 as a group. What stands out to you? What surprises you, encourages you, challenges you, or raises questions?

God is at work in both Cornelius and Peter before they ever meet. What do you notice about how God leads each of them? What does this reveal about God's character and His desire for people to know Him?

Peter initially resists what God shows him in the vision. What do you notice about Peter's response and how his understanding changes throughout the story? What can we learn from his experience?

Peter eventually recognizes that God does not show favouritism. How does this challenge the way people understood who could belong to God's family? What does it reveal about God's heart for people?

Cornelius is described as devout, generous, and prayerful, yet God sends Peter to tell him about Jesus. What does this part of the story reveal about the importance of Jesus and the good news He brings?

Peter had to be willing to reconsider beliefs and practices that had shaped his entire life. When have you experienced God challenging something you believed or assumed? How did you respond? Is there an area where you might need to be more open to His correction?

As you reflect on this passage, what might God be inviting you to reconsider, surrender, or respond to? How can the group pray for you? Take time to pray together as a group.
