Weavers Writings

Wait A Minute

You have likely heard the story of the man who prayed, “Lord, give me patience, and give it to me right now!” We smile because we recognize something of ourselves in that prayer. We want patience, but we don't particularly enjoy the circumstances that help us develop it. We want to be patient people without having to wait, endure difficulties, or deal with frustrating situations.

Yet patience is one of the qualities God desires to develop in every Christian. Galatians 5:22–23 identifies patience as part of the fruit of the Spirit. It is not simply a personality trait that some people naturally possess and others lack. It is a spiritual quality that grows as we become more like Christ.

Patience grows when we learn to trust God's timing. We live in a world that values speed. We want immediate answers, quick solutions, and instant results. But God does not always work according to our schedules. Abraham waited years for the promised son. Joseph endured years of hardship before seeing God's purposes unfold. Even the Israelites had to learn that following God sometimes meant waiting on Him.

James 5:7 reminds us of the farmer who patiently waits for the precious fruit of the earth. He plants the seed, tends the soil, and trusts that the harvest will come in its proper season. Likewise, spiritual growth requires us to trust that God is working even when we cannot see immediate results. Patience grows when we learn to respond rather than react. How do we respond when someone interrupts us, disappoints us, or treats us unfairly? Do we immediately become irritated, speak harshly, or assume the worst? Proverbs 14:29 tells us, “Whoever is slow to anger has great understanding, but he who has a hasty temper exalts folly”.

Every frustrating encounter presents an opportunity to practice patience. Sometimes the most Christlike thing we can do is pause before speaking, listen before judging, and extend grace instead of expressing irritation. We should remember how patiently God has dealt with us. If He has shown such patience toward our weaknesses, shouldn't we extend that same patience to others?

Patience grows when we remember that God is still working on us. Spiritual maturity does not happen overnight. Just as a tree does not produce fruit the day it is planted, Christians do not develop Christlike character instantly. Growth takes time, effort, and perseverance (Romans 5:3-4). So just wait a minute and remember, God is not finished with us yet. He is patiently shaping us into the people He wants us to become. May we be just as patient with His work in our lives as He has been with us.
